09:00-09:10

👤 TOGETHER

Morning huddle

Say today's number: sessions booked, or the buyer you'll have confirmed for Friday by tonight.

09:10-09:40

SOLO

Plan your usability tests

You now have a thing, so the question changes from “is the pain real?” to “does my build remove it, and is that worth money?”

- Real tasks on the live URL, not a demo you drive
- Three probes reading whether they would actually pay
- Five sessions, booked for this morning

09:40-12:40

🔗 OUT

Live usability and buying-signal tests

Watching five people fumble your build teaches you more than fifty surveys. Watch, don't narrate, and don't rescue them when they get stuck.

- Hand them a task, then stay quiet
- Write down where they hesitate, not just where they fail
- Ask what they'd pay, only after they've used it

12:40-13:20

Lunch

Back at 13:20

13:20-13:50

SOLO

Find the patterns, prioritise

By Friday you can build three things not thirty and phone a handful of people, so numbers decide, not the loudest voice.

D4-PRIORITISE

- Score every requested change with RICE and MoSCoW
- Rank every tester by likelihood to buy

13:50-14:05

Break

Back at 14:05

14:05-14:35

SOLO

Go-to-market plan

The warmest prospect closes far faster than a cold one, so you start there, not at the top of an alphabet.

D4-GTM-PLAN

14:35-15:05

∞ 1:1

Choose your pricing model

How you charge decides who buys and how fast they say yes. This afternoon's sales deck carries a price slide, so the model and the floor get fixed now, with Seb, not guessed at alone.

- Name what you charge against: the value metric
- One reason logged for every rejected model
- The exact number is tomorrow morning's first job

15:05-15:35

SOLO

ICP, sales deck, client intake

ICP and sales deck

A prospect who hears their own words read back, then sees two others got the result they want, is a prospect who signs.

Client intake

Most first sales die in the gap between the nod and the kickoff. Map it now: four stages, one owner, one SLA each.

15:35-15:55

SOLO

Build the marketing funnel

The path a stranger walks from first hearing about you to paying, in four stages, each with a channel, an asset and a number.

15:55-16:25

👥 TOGETHER

Channels are a hypothesis, not a checklist

A channel is a bet, not a box to tick: a cost, a reach, and a conversion guess. Run the cheapest, fastest test first. Kill what shows no signal. Double down on what does.

REFRAME

Stop asking

"Which channels should I be on?" Start asking: "Which channel can I test for GBP 20 by Monday?"

15:55-16:25

👥 TOGETHER

How to test a channel in a day

01 Write the hypothesis down

"If I post in [X community], I expect [Y] replies and [Z] worth a call." A number, not a hope.

02 Spend the smallest amount that gets a real answer

One post, one ad, one batch of ten DMs. Not a month-long campaign.

03 Measure the number you wrote down

Not likes, not impressions. The number that actually predicts revenue.

04 Kill it or double down

No signal after a fair test, drop it. Real signal, put the next hour into it, not a new channel.

15:55-16:25

👥 TOGETHER

Worked example

CLICK A CARD TO SEE WHAT ACTUALLY HAPPENED

THE ASSUMPTION

“LinkedIn outreach will work, everyone says so”

TRY INSTEAD

Tested: 40 DMs, 2 replies, 0 calls booked. Killed it.

THE ASSUMPTION

“A Jersey Facebook group is too small to bother”

TRY INSTEAD

Tested: 1 post, 6 replies, 3 calls booked by Thursday. Doubled down.

15:55-16:25

👥 TOGETHER

What a funnel actually looks like

Illustrative example: the drop between stages is where you test next

15:55-16:25

👥 TOGETHER

Then: funnel wall build

Group Whole room, standing

Bring Your four funnel stages, written up: channel, asset, number

Time ~10 minutes

0:00 Pin your four stages on the wall: channel, asset, number, at each one.

5:00 Walk the room and read everyone else's.

8:00 Defend your weakest step to whoever's standing next to you.

DEBRIEF

Where's the biggest drop between stages, and what's your cheapest test for it?

16:25-16:40

Break

Back at 16:40

16:40-17:00

SOLO

Onboarding pack

A first week that feels handled is the cheapest retention you will ever buy. Six sections, a week-1 timeline, a named human to email.

17:00-17:15

SOLO

Book the sale

01 Right person

Not just any contact, the warmest one from today's ranking.

02 Specific time

A slot on the table, not "sometime Friday".

03 A reply that says yes

Confirmed before you leave the room tonight.

Regulated buyers rarely take a same-day meeting, so you ask on Thursday for Friday with a time already on the table.

D4-BOOK-SALE

Evening close

01

Roll call: read every name and their booked Friday time out loud

02

Rehearse the price out loud tonight

03

Bring your three-item fix list tomorrow, not a feature wishlist

Watch them use it, don't ask if they like it.
